

Henderson Anniversary Project Publication Contributing Authors

Allan Borowski PhD is Emeritus Professor of Social Work and Social Policy at La Trobe University, Melbourne and an adjunct professor in the Department of Social Work, The Chinese University of Hong Kong. He is a fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia, the Gerontological Society of America, the Australian Association of Gerontology and the Australian College of Social Work.

Bea Cantillon is Professor of Social Policy and Director of the Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. She has published widely and internationally on a wide range of issues relating to poverty, social policy, social security, the welfare state, and gender. She has acted as a consultant to, among others, the OECD, the European Commission and the Belgian government.

Bob Gregory is a Professor in the College of Business and Economics at the Australian National University. He has made major contributions to the development of economic policy in Australia, and is an elected Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences (1979). In 1983-84 he held the Chair in Australian Studies at Harvard University, and in 1996 was awarded the Order of Australia Medal.

Boyd Hunter is a Senior Fellow at the Centre for Aboriginal Economic Policy Research, The Australian National University and an IZA Research Fellow. He recently won the Sir Timothy Coghlan Prize for the best article in Australian Economic History Review and is currently the President of the Australian Society of Labour Economics.

Danielle Venn is a Research Fellow at the Centre for Aboriginal Economic Policy Research (CAEPR) at the Australian National University (ANU). She holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Melbourne and a Bachelor of Economics (Hons) from the University of New England. Prior to joining CAEPR, Danielle worked as a Research Fellow at the National Centre for Epidemiology and Population Health at the ANU. From 2006 to 2012, she was a Labour Economist working on a range of employment and social policy issues for the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development.

David Ingles is a Senior Research Fellow at the Tax and Transfer Policy Institute (TTPI), specialising in tax and social security. He has worked in various Government Departments, including DSS (later FACSIA), the Treasury, and EPAC. In the 1980s he was an advisor to Ministers in the Hawke Government. Prior to TTPI he worked for the Australia Institute, specialising in tax and pension reform.

David Stanton is an Honorary Associate Professor at the Crawford School of Public Policy at the Australian National University where he teaches and researches social policy. He was Director of the Australian Institute of Family Studies and worked for the Australian Government for some 36 years. David was appointed a Member of the Order of Australia in the General Division (AM) in the 2017 Australia Day Honours List "for distinguished service to public administration, to social policy development and as an academic".

Francisco Azpitarte is the Ronald Henderson Fellow at the Melbourne Institute of Applied Economic and Social Research, University of Melbourne and the Brotherhood of St Laurence. He holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Vigo and received his MSc in Economic Analysis from the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona in 2005. His research interests include the analysis of economic inequality, poverty, and the inter-generational transmission of disadvantage. In 2015 he was awarded the Economic Record best paper prize by the Economic Society of Australia.

Greg Marston is Professor and Head of School in the School of Social Science at the University of Queensland. He has expertise in qualitative approaches to social inquiry and has used a variety of methods to study poverty and debt, refugee resettlement, housing and homelessness, income support, unemployment, the changing mixed economy of welfare, and the role of social policy and urban planning in addressing the climate change challenge. He is a member of the Australian Research Council College of Experts and is also the Basic Income Earth Network (BIEN) representative in Australia.

Guyonne Kalb is a Professorial Research Fellow and Director of the Labour Economics and Social Policy Program in the Melbourne Institute of Applied Economic and Social Research at The University of Melbourne. She has a PhD in Econometrics from Monash University and is an associate editor for Fiscal Studies and The Economic Record.

Jeff Borland is Truby Williams Professor of Economics at the University of Melbourne. In 1997 he was awarded the Australian Academy of Social Sciences Medal for Excellence in Scholarship in the Social Sciences, and in 2002 was made a Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences. He has acted as a consultant on labour market and microeconomics issues to organisations such as the OECD, IMF, ACCC, New Zealand Treasury, and Productivity Commission.

Jennifer Mays is an academic in the School of Public Health and Social Work, Queensland University of Technology, Australia. She has extensive academic and professional experience across university, government and community sectors, and conducts teaching and research in poverty, social policy, social justice, disability and social citizenship. Her publications include Mays, J., Marston, G., & Tomlinson, J. (Eds.). (2016). Basic income in Australia and New Zealand: Perspectives from neo-liberal frontiers. Basic Income Series. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

Joshua Healy is a Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for Workplace Leadership, University of Melbourne. Dr Healy has led or taken part in many research consultancies for the Australian Government, employers, unions and other research organisations. These include include detailed studies of paid-care workforce issues in the aged, community and disability sectors, the settlement experiences of new immigrants to Australia, and the measurement of skill shortages. He is a frequent commentator on Australian employment and labour market issues, and his work has appeared in a variety of national media outlets including the Conversation and Australian Financial Review.

Judith Yates currently is an honorary associate in the School of Economics at the University of Sydney following a career of more than 40 years in academia. Her primary research has been in housing economics, finance and policy. She holds a Doctor of Economic Science from the University of Amsterdam.

Karen Fisher is a Professor at the Social Policy Research Centre at the University of NSW Sydney, where she leads the Disability Research Program. She conducts disability and mental health policy in Australia and China.

Lixia Qu is a Senior Research Fellow at the Australian Institute of Family Studies. Her specialist research areas include couple formation pathways and trajectories, fertility decision-making, the impacts of parental separation on financial living standards and personal wellbeing, and post-separation parenting. She recently led a national study of carers of children who could no longer live with their parents.

Matthew Gray is Director of the ANU Centre for Social Research and Methods. He has published research on a wide range of social and economic policy issues including those related to Indigenous Australians. Professor Gray has extensive experience in evaluating major government policies and programs having led the Australian Institute of Family Studies evaluation of the 2006 changes to the family law system and having been heavily involved in evaluating the Government's Stronger Families and Communities Strategy.

Miranda Stewart is Director of the Tax and Transfer Policy Institute (TTPI) at the Crawford School of Policy, Australian National University and a Professor at The University of Melbourne Law School. She is an expert in tax and public finance, including the interaction of tax and social security systems. Miranda has consulted widely on tax policy and reform and has previously worked in government and private practice.

Peter Whiteford is a Professor in the Crawford School of Public Policy at The Australian National University, Canberra. He previously worked as a Principal Administrator in the Directorate of Employment, Labour and Social Affairs of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development in Paris. His work at the OECD encompassed pension and welfare policies in OECD countries, Eastern Europe and China. He also worked on child poverty, family assistance policies, and welfare reform.

Ruth Weston is Assistant Director of the Australian Institute for Family Studies, where her work focusses on family transitions and wellbeing at both macro- and micro-levels. In the 2008 Australia Day Honours List, Ruth received the Public Service Medal (PSM) "for outstanding public service as a researcher and contributor to policy development, particularly in the areas of separation and divorce, family law, family relationships, fertility decision-making and child support."

Sheila Shaver is Emeritus Professor in the Social Policy Research Centre at the University of NSW. Her research focuses on social inequality and the welfare state, including international comparative study, and she has a particular interest in gender and social policy. Professor Shaver is a former Deputy Director of the Social Policy Research Centre and Pro Vice-chancellor at the University of Western Sydney, and a current member of the Australian Research Integrity Committee. – please note that Sheila will not be presenting at the 2018 Henderson Conference.

Terry Carney AO, FAAL is Emeritus Professor of Law at Sydney University and Visiting Research Professor at UTS. His publications include Social Security Law and Policy (Federation) and the Laws of Australia title. A past president of the International Academy of Law and Mental Health, he chaired the National Advisory Council on Social Welfare and the Institute of Family Studies board.

Troy Henderson is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Economy at the University of Sydney. His research examines Basic Income as a Policy Option for Australia, and has been published in Basic Income Studies and presented at national and international conferences. Henderson is a regular media commentator on potential pathways to Basic Income in Australia.